

What Can I Do As A Movement Science Major?

Movement Science

Sample Careers in Movement Science

Requiring undergraduate education:

Health and fitness professional
Pharmaceutical and health product sales
Health and fitness media relations/reports
Health and fitness consulting
Corporate fitness (requires certification)
Personal Trainer (requires certification)
Laboratory technician/study coordinator

Requiring graduate education:

Clinical Exercise Physiologist	Prosthetist
Recreation Therapist	Orthotist
Specialist in Sports Nutrition/Dietetics	Pharmacist
Biomechanics Consultant	Optometrist
Physician	Veterinarian
Physical Therapist	Podiatrist
Occupational Therapist	Scientist
Physician's Assistant	Professor
Chiropractor	Neurophysiologist
Public Health Specialist	Salesperson/support person for neurotechnology
Speech Therapist	Human Factors Consultant (Ergonomist)
Dentist	Orthodontist

Helpful Transferable Skills

- Communication
- Time management and organization
- Problem-solving

(over)

- Critical thinking
- Creativity
- Research skills
- Basic first-aid and CPR

Related Web Sites

American College of Sports Medicine (see also ACSM credentialing and certification)
<http://www.acsm.org>

American Physical Therapy Association
<http://www.apta.org>

American Physiological Society
<http://www.the-aps.org/>

American Society of Biomechanics
<http://www.asbweb.org/>

National Strength and Conditioning Association
<http://www.nscs-lift.org/>

National Society for the Psychology of Sport and Physical Activity
<http://www.naspspa.org/>

North American Society for the Sociology of Sport
<http://www.nasss.org/>

For more information contact
KINESIOLOGY: 734-764-4472 or www.kines.umich.edu